

Dojo Technology Releases New Website to Recognize Advances in Service Offerings

January 21, 2005

“This is the perfect time to present a new image of Dojo,” says Ed Hamilton, President and founder of Dojo Technology. “In our three years of operation we have been steadily building a suite of tools to accommodate the rapidly changing industry of Electronic Discovery. As we record phenomenal growth in business development, both domestically and our exploding growth in foreign language conversion for our International clients, this proves an opportune time to show our current clients and potential new clients the scope of our abilities.”

Dojo Technology hired 2Bcreative, a Northwest firm, to develop a website appropriate for the growth, diversity and client base that Dojo has been developed. 2Bcreative was chosen for their awareness of the effective integration of business goals, marketing savvy and an ability to present potentially complex information to a diverse audience base.
